

Random Notes

The information given by Prime Minister St. Laurent that there would be no tie-up of Canada's railways, which he received in briefs prepared by the delegates of various trade union bodies recently, will be welcomed with relief by the general public of the country.

Now that the railroad management has shown unwillingness to accede to all the demands of union leaders, no doubt there are many industrial sections of interested parties who would prefer that the dispute of the non-operating of rail and employees should be brought to the climax of a work stoppage, as was the case in 1935 when strikes action was called just prior to the harvesting and the consequent movement of grain.

However, when it is remembered that the stoppage of August, 1935, resulted in the complete cessation of all movement of movement across the whole immense railroad system of the country, it would seem that it is self-evident to the most arrogant of union leaders that no government, worthy of governing, would permit such a situation to arise again.

It may be asked, what then becomes of the long-established union rule of hit-and-hold? In other words, the right to strike? The obvious reply can only be that times have changed and nowhere more so than in a country which emerges swiftly from a primitive to a leading industrial economy, as has happened in Canada.

Some hot-heads in union ranks may look upon the prime minister's decision as a restraint upon liberty amounting to slave labor; yet, to take but one example of essential national service, the fact of such a situation would exist, there is nothing that is known to prevent the unsteady hand of the strike leader from his job and causing another. It has really happened.

The non-operating railroad employees enjoy what some other union workers are inclined to regard as a sheltered occupation, meaning thereby, practically permanent job security. Nevertheless, they are entitled to treatment equitable with similar branches of responsible labor, and while it is probable all the demands made on management will be met, since it's an old, old situation, union bargainers, to ask more than that is to be received, it can be confidently predicted that advances in employment conditions will be achieved without the necessity of extreme measures.

Hinder shows that the press has been sufficiently on the side of the common people.

Delta 4-H Grain Club

Program and Banquet

A good number of parents and friends gathered in the annex of the Delta United Church to witness the 4-H Grain Club Banquet, and program, held on Thursday, Dec. 15th. The long tables were set for sixty-five guests, but owing to the banquet being postponed from the original date of Dec. 15th, on account of the blizzard, this was a big factor in there not being as large an attendance as anticipated.

Wayne Battle, chairman, laid out all to rise and sing "O Canada!" He then invited Rev. Dunscombe to read in singing the 4-H Club Grace.

Mayor Gibson then gave the opening address and welcomed everyone to the banquet. After expressing the pleasure of both Mr. Gibson and himself at being present to attend the banquet, he congratulated the members of the club on their work, and wished the best of luck to them for the future.

Mr. L. Andrews, a Vice-President of the Delta Agricultural Society, welcomed all the guests on behalf of the society. He then introduced the 4-H Club work, and congratulated the members on their work.

Mr. Sean Pettem, Delta Agriculturist, expressed his pleasure at once again attending the Delta banquet, and mentioned the rapid growth of the clubs throughout the year. He mentioned that he had been nine hundred guests attending the banquet in the Drumheller area during the past weeks. He recommended that the members of the Delta 4-H Grain Club do their utmost to get as many new members into their club as possible. He then gave a review of the year's activities between the clubs and the Agricultural Society, as explained about the grain plots, grain samples, Thematic displays and awards. Mr. Pettem expressed regret at this being the last year for Mr. Bert Schooppe as president of the club, to which Mrs. Schooppe very graciously welcomed and thanked the members.

Mr. A. Kitchner rendered two vocal solos.

Mr. Dennis Williams entertained with a guitar solo.

The chairman then thanked everyone responsible for making the banquet such a success.

Mr. Williams then entertained with a ballet dance.

Mr. Walter Wade, Drumheller, acted as speaker for the evening.

Mr. Sean Pettem, Delta Agriculturist, expressed his pleasure at once again attending the Delta banquet, and mentioned that he had been nine hundred guests attending the banquet in the Drumheller area during the past weeks.

Mr. L. Andrews, a Vice-President of the Delta Agricultural Society, welcomed all the guests on behalf of the society. He then introduced the 4-H Club work, and congratulated the members on their work.

ON TOUR—Democratic Presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson, on a "hand-shaking" tour of Florida, gets better than he gives from Jackie Hunt, welcoming Queen at the University of Miami, Coral Gables.

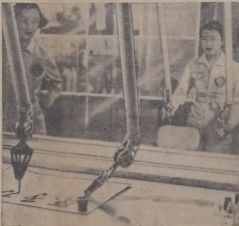

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD WHEAT KING—Jerry Lento, 12, from Hammond, Ill., won the year's wheat king title in the South American wheat championships at the International Exposition in Chicago. He is tonight to crown hold the title. Winning wheat came from Liverpool and on father's farm. It was Jerry's first crop.

DOUBLE EXPOSURE—Newspaper cameraman Ed Schulte didn't shoot for overdeveloped photos when he took pictures of neighborhood youngsters, but there's what he got. Shot shown at home as another photographer recorded Schulte's consciousness from the slingshot at the Schultzes, N.Y. home.

FLAYER PALACE—It's one of the few commercial buildings ever built in a modern style. The headquarters for a photographic record from the world's most famous, Hollywood, Calif. Architecture, the building isn't a very efficient farm for office use. About 50 percent of floor space is usable. All offices have outside exposure.

SYMBOLS OF THE A-AGE—Mechanical "hands" point Japanese symbols under control of technicians, right, background, in Tokyo, Japan, at an atom-for-peace exhibit. Hands are designed for handling of dangerous radioactive substances.

NANETTE PARAY RECOVERS—TV comedian Ed Cramer pipes a visit to his leading lady, Nanette Paray, in a New York hospital where she is recovering from a back operation. Paray was slumped on the bed by a piece of falling pipe during a recent performance. Her eyes were affected by the blow, blown the dark glasses.

HAPPIEST FELLOW—That's the way Eddie Joost expressed his feelings when he learned he had been named to receive the President Seal of the Pacific Coast Baseball League next year. He is seen reading congratulations in his home at Buellington, Calif.

HOLIDAY CHORES PILED UP—These jobs were done during the Christmas season: C. Conner, workman from Dublin, left. He was hip-deep in snow—and work—as heavy, early winter snow hampered harvesting of the Christmas tree crop. Then he had his job cut out by the snow. At right, Frank Bismuth, head chef at New York City's Hotel St. Moritz, ready to serve the food from Thanksgiving right on through New Year's. He shows us the prep work to serve his way through some 5,000 pounds of tubers. They're only a small portion of the loads which will pass through his kitchen during the holiday season.

CANDLES TO LIGHT THE CHRIST CHILD'S WAY—Tim runs in Boston, Germany, with candles in an illuminated line before the first of four Advent candles which traditionally light the Christ child's way to birth. One candle was lighted each of the four Sundays of Advent, the liturgical season which preceded the celebration of the birth of Christ. In some instances, the Advent display takes the form of a wreath. Symbols of the enlightenment which drive away the darkness of paganism, candles have long been an important accessory in rituals of Christianity.

GIANT'S PLAYTHING—Resembling an out-of-this-world version of a playground slide, the experimental rocket structure is a 34 ft. high. Located in the Downs Mountains, near Oxnard, July 12, it was ready for the 1960 Summer Olympic Games.
